“ I will always remember her laugh and her kind spirit, she loved with open arms and didn't know a stranger. Her husband, sons & grandchildren were her entire world when she spoke of them her eyes would just light up or you could just hear the love in her voice.

I will never forget our Thanksgiving one particular year. Lynn and I were doing all the cooking running between the houses because we didn't have enough oven space for everything, Richard was on grandpa duty watching Mia in the back bedroom. Which was entertaining in itself she kept on getting onto Richard, he wanted to wear his pink shorts and was parading around the house holding Mia peaking around the corner into the kitchen hollering things to get under her skin, I was just laughing telling him not to get on Lynn's bad side that day or she would get him. She finally had enough and gave him a piece of her mind and said "fine you can stay in the back all by yourself the rest of the day and not eat because you are not going to be around my family looking like that you just need to get dressed for the day and I better not hear a word out of you hollering at me to make you a plate because it is not going to happen." (I edited it of course lol) He laughed and snuggled up next to her then went on to the back to the bedroom. She winked at me and said watch he will get around now if he knows what's best for him, needless to say she was always right. We were running around making all the magic happen, she showed me how to do some of her delish recipes and lots of taste testing here and there. Lots of laughs that day and clearly one of the best!

She was like a mother figure/most treasured friend that I could ever ask for, she was always there for a shoulder to cry on or just to listen and give advice we could just lose track of time and talk for hours. We would rush around in the mornings just so that we could watch our afternoon soaps and have our discussions after, so many memories of her I will cherish forever. I am very grateful that she was such a huge part of my life and all the experiences her and I had it was a very special bond we shared. She will be missed tremendously and remembered forever.

Love you always Lynn and as we would say "it isn't goodbye it is I will see you later and I will see you on the other side for round 2 to see what we can get into" and until then my dear friend I promise to always keep your memory very much alive!
