“ In our teen and early adult lives kyle and I played a lot of music and sang together. I'll never forget one night when we had our little band set up in a back room at Grandma Viola's house. (Kyle Guitar, Frank Drums, Me keyboard) We were working on a country rock song and I was messing with Keyboard sounds, trying to find the right one for that particular song. One of the sounds came out pretty weird and I tried playing background with it. To this day I can vividly see the look on Kyle's face - half amusement - half horrified- as he said " damn Sis . . Are you trying to play Adams Family or Munsters or what? " we all busted out laughing and I still laugh whenever thinking about that. Love you Brother! I bet you're still playing beautiful music. I think about you every day. Love, Sis

“ I've known Kyle since the mid 1980's. He was in a rock band who's name I can't remember but he was happy to be playing. We reconnected in 1994 just before the Ambush Band formed. Kyle continued to write songs and we produced three music videos that are on YouTube. He is a great friend and always made folks feel at ease around him. He appreciated everyone that came out to hear his music. Rest in peace my brother.
