“ When our Uncle Paul came to our house and spent the night, it was always fun. He loved all 5 of us kids. Paul would sit in the floor with us, he would tickle us until we couldn't take it anymore, we would giggle and laugh out loud and come back for more, he could throw us up in the air and catch us. Paul would go to the store and get food to grill cause our dad never was into that so it was a treat for us. Mom would cook breakfast when Uncle Paul came, that was a plus ( we always had food though ). In the evenings we sat around the kitchen table and played cards and bored games. Paul never left our house before mom fried chicken in her big iron skillet. Those were good times you can't get back.
